Docket # 00P-1211/CPI

Dear Commissioner Henney:

I want a lot of testing before genetically modified foods get into the diet of ^{my} family.

Why all the rush? 130 countries have unanimously adopted a treaty which will govern trade in genetically modified organisms. This *treaty sets out how countries can ban GMOs based on the precautionary principle even without sufficient scientific evidence. The U.S. should be part of this group of cautious countries rather than letting the corporations bludgeon us into a hasty decision that we may bitterly regret later. Those corporations are not interested in "feeding the hungry," but rather in making huge profits.

Please, let's take our time.

Sincerely,

Mary E. Bolton
